A DOG'S SORROW. He Knew His Little Playmate Was Dead

and Showed It. Several months ago this advertisement appeared in a daily paper: DLOST-A small brown-and-white dog of no particular breed; had on a link collar; answers to the name of "Benny;" he was the pet of a little sick girl, and a liberal reward will be paid for his return to 225 --- st. Months passed away, and the dog "of no particular breed" was mourned as lost, and a constant watch was kept for him by the family who owned him, until matters of graver import demanded their attention. Then the dog came home one day, dragging a long piece of dusty rope after him. He was tired and footsore, but he ran joyfully from one member of the family to another, looking for his little mistress. Before any one realized what he meant to do, he had escaped from them, and hurried upstairs to her room. The single watcher there had no power to stop him, for he had seen that dear little figure on the silent bed, and running around to the other side he sprang up and then stopped, as if conscious for the first time that something was wrong, that the still, white figure made no move toward him. He looked into the dear, pale face, and scented the cluster of lovely flowers that lay upon the motionless heart, took a step nearer to her, and his brown eyes, glowing with love and delight, grew solemn and thoughtful. He threw back his head, and gave a long, quivering cry that was filled with pathos and sorrow that was human in its depths of angulsh and hopelessness. Then he ran out on the street, and was seen no more. But, if ever a dog's heart was broken, poor little Benny's broke when he realized through some occult knowledge of his own that his little playmate was dead.

SIX ROOM COTTAGE FOR $1,200.

Attractive, Well Proportioned and Made of the Best Materials. [Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

There is a charm for all in the appearance of a neat and tasty cottage, with an abundance of fresh air, sunlight and foliage, which is not possible to be enjoyed by those in all walks of life. The amount of room in the plan which we present today is astonishing for a house of its character and

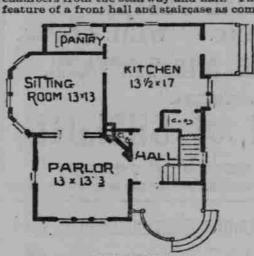

PERSPECTIVE VIEW.

One cannot reasonably expect that a cheap house can be as large or present as pretentious an appearance as its more costly neighbor, but by employing a style of exterior neat, but plain, and using good proportions we may obtain a home that is entirely satisfactory on all these points. It is easy enough to build one that is cheap, but it is another matter to build one that has this feature and a fair share of the comfort and conveniences desired. Of course everything must be done on a more or less reduced scale. The rooms cannot be so large, for we must reduce the amount of ground covered to the smallest amount possible, as it is the entire area of ground covered we must take into the estimate of cost. The height of stories must also b considered. Of course very large rooms re quire proportionately higher ceilings, but moderately low ceilings are preferable, as they are more easily heated. The demand for attractive low cost houses has become so great that architects have been forced to give them their attention. This plan has six good rooms besides accessories. It will be observed that they are all of fair size, both above and below and that direct access is had to all the chambers from the stairway and hall. The FIRST STORY. modious as those shown here is of itself a striking excellence, the value of which will be daily appreciated by the occupants of

A very general impression seems to pre-vail among those who build either for rent or their own occupancy the cheaper class of houses that a front hall and stairway are luxuries to which none but the rich can justly aspire. That this is an error we have shown both in this and in former plans of houses costing no more than this. A front hall ought to be regarded, if not in the light of a necessity, at least in that of a very substantial comfort which amply repays the cost of construction. An outer doorway opening into the room in which the guests are being entertained is an awk-ward arrangement. So is a main stairway leading from the rear of the parlor or sitting room. Both can be avoided with economy The wood finish of this house is of select ed cypress in the natural color for the first floor and painted white pine in the second story. An open grate is provided in the parlor, provided with a simple wood mantel of neat design. The pantry is well fitted with shelves and bins. The kitchen is quite large and intended for use also as a dining room. A rear exit is had from the kitchen the inside by stairs placed under the main flight and going down from the kitchen. The hall stairway is finished with square newels and simply turned balusters. stairs land in the upper ball, from which di-rect entrance is had to the three chambers. The plastering is of three coat work and finished in white. The first story of the house is nine feet and the second story eight feet in the clear. The foundation of the building is of good stone laid in lime mortar. The porches have level ceilings of yellow pine. The frame is of sound pine timber, properly framed, raised and secured. The studding, joists and rafters are placed 16 inches from centers and the joists well bridged. The windows are hung with weights. The outside of the frame is sheathed and papered and covered with clear pine siding. All outside woodwork usually painted has three coats hand mixed paint in suitable

The house has been built after these plans for $1,200 complete. In some localities it would of course cost more.

Interior Decoration.

Dainty bedroom papers are much in de-mand, and wonderfully beautiful some of them are. The one fault in rooms of any size is lack of character and a somewhat faded ensemble, but even that has been obviated by a clever device. In the home of a recent bride of artistc tastes the walls of the guestroom are papered with a design of pale pink upon a creamy white ground, and the defect of two pale tints is entirely overcome by a bordering of olive cartridge paper. Each of the four walls has become a panel, and the plain tint runs around all sides, so that the sweet, tender pinks are inclosed in a frame.—Architectural and Building Monthly.
